Families with kids can participate in the first ever National Geographic Ocean Exploration Children's Workshop to learn what it takes to be a great explorer, and understand the most important global factors for ocean conservation. Aquarium and the revamped Maritime Experiential Museum. More information can be found at www.rwsentosa.com/oceanwonders

Search for the Junior Maritime Explorer

Aspiring explorers can join four legendary seafarers – Marco Polo, Sang Nila Utama, Ibn Battuta and Zheng He – on an adventure along the Maritime Silk Route at the newly-revamped Maritime Experiential Museum. Housing a total of 15 immersive galleries including five brand new zones, the attraction holds a combination of state-of-the-art visual projections, multimedia shows, olfactory experiences and plenty of stunning Instagram-worthy displays. Guests can even get hands-on tying classic mariners' knots at the Learning To Navigate chamber, or be amazed by the Jewel of Muscat, an Arabian ship which made a tumultuous 138-day voyage from Oman to Singapore in 2010 using ancient navigational methods with a crew of 15. For a multi-sensory experience, head to Typhoon Theater which simulates a sinking ship in a treacherous storm.

Kids aged seven to 12 years can sign up to become a Junior Maritime Explorer – a star reporter who will be the voice of maritime adventures, and appear on TV. To join this contest, participants can submit a short news-report-style video on a maritime event, or even on the museum itself. One grand prize winner will get to meet and interview National Geographic Explorer Erika Bergman, bring her on a tour of the Maritime Experiential Museum, and be featured in a National Geographic video along with Erika. This contest is held in partnership with National Geographic. More information can be found at <http://juniormaritimeexplorer.com/>
