Making waves for a cause: As part of the global celebration for World Oceans Day, S.E.A. Aquarium will bring together, for the first time, a team comprising freediving record holders as they dive into the aquarium without any breathing apparatus. Similar to aquatic mammals, the divers have to periodically resurface to breathe. By putting themselves in their shoes, it brings home the message that pollutants such as nets and plastic bags will entangle marine animals, making it difficult for them to breathe or eat. SINGAPORE, 7 June 2016 – In celebration of World Oceans Day, S.E.A. Aquarium at Resorts World Sentosa will launch a 10-day conservation-themed festival to inspire visitors to protect the world’s oceans. Visitors to the aquarium can catch a team comprising freediving record holders from Singapore and Malaysia as they plunge into seemingly impossible depths with a single breath of air, view stunning images at Asia’s first World Oceans Day photo gallery, and pledge their commitment to conservation by contributing to one of Singapore’s largest art murals made up of thousands of plastic bottle caps.

Held from 17 to 26 June 2016, the activities aim to educate visitors on the threats facing the oceans and the importance of protecting them. World Oceans Day is a United Nations-recognised day of celebration and action for the ocean held annually on 8 June. This year’s theme “Healthy Oceans, Healthy Planet” brings people around the world together to raise awareness on the threats facing the oceans such as climate change, overfishing and pollution.

Jason Horkin, Senior Vice President of Attractions at Resorts World Sentosa said: “We are celebrating World Oceans Day at the S.E.A. Aquarium with a series of educational and interactive programmes to share the important message that everyone can play their part to protect our oceans and conserve its inhabitants. Oceans are the largest ecosystems on Earth but the threat of pollution is affecting millions of species. Small actions like not disposing thrash into the oceans have a big, direct impact in saving marine life from the danger of ingesting plastic or entangling in debris. We hope visitors to the S.E.A. Aquarium during the 10-day festival will leave inspired to do more to sustain our oceans – for present and future generations.

Singapore’s First Freediving Demonstration By Record Holders
For the first time, S.E.A. Aquarium will bring together a team comprising freediving record holders from Apnea Association of Singapore and Malaysia as they fre dive in the aquarium’s iconic and largest habitat – the Open Ocean Habitat. Free diving is a physically challenging activity that involves going deep underwater without any breathing apparatus. Divers will enter the 12m-deep exhibit, holding their breath for several minutes while swimming gracefully amongst 40,000 marine animals from 120 species.

Similar to aquatic mammals, the divers have to periodically resurface to breathe. By putting themselves in their shoes, it brings home the message that pollutants such as nets and plastic bags will entangle marine animals, making it difficult for them to breathe or eat. Through a live commentary on the divers’ demonstrations, S.E.A. Aquarium hopes to educate visitors on the importance of keeping the oceans free from pollution to ensure the survival of marine life. Visitors can catch the freediving demonstrations at 12.00pm, 12.30pm, 1.30pm and 2.00pm on the weekends of 17 to 26 June at the Open Ocean Habitat.

Asia’s First World Oceans Day Photo Gallery
S.E.A. Aquarium will also host Asia’s first World Oceans Day photo gallery that will showcase winning images from a worldwide photo competition supported by the United Nations. Through compelling narratives accompanying these stunning images, visitors will appreciate the beauty and significance of the oceans to mankind.

Conservation Pledge Walls
Visitors can pledge their commitment to conservation at a gigantic photo pledge wall by taking a picture with their family and friends, or contribute to one of Singapore’s largest art murals made up of tens of thousands of plastic bottle caps. Illustrating how small actions can create large impact for the environment, visitors have the opportunity to place their bottle caps on the mural themselves and be part of the collective effort.

New Fishy Residents at Tropical SEAFest
S.E.A. Aquarium recently introduced new fishy residents at three thematic habitats – Hawaii, California and the Caribbean – as part of a Tropical SEAFest. Over 200 specimens from more than 40 species are featured in these new permanent exhibits. Some of the new species include the bright orange Garibaldis and California sheephead fish in an underwater Southern Californian kelp forest, and the threatened Rooster Hogfish, named for its pig-like snout and large protrusible mouth.

Other activities include a series of engaging talks from aquarists, interactive games and an educational trail for kids to discover more about the new underwater residents and what they can do to help protect the oceans.
